For the sparkling wine Traube PUR, grapes of the Zweigelt variety were harvested and pressed immediately after harvesting, which is why the sparkling wine is a rich straw yellow with a delicate pink hue. The grapes come from the Seeberg, a very poor primary rock soil at about 320m above sea level. After spontaneous fermentation, the basic sparkling wine was stored in wooden barrels for 1 year and filled into sparkling wine bottles at the next harvest in 2018 and provided with a fresh, sweet storm to initiate the second fermentation in a completely natural way, without sugar, without yeast, without added sulfur. The sparkling wine then sat on the yeast for at least 36 months before it was disgorged without dosage. The result is a mineral, stimulating sparkling wine with a very fine perlage and a long, creamy finish. It is therefore well suited as a meal companion
